oyalist Bitterness Following Empress' Death Is Fast Subsiding

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, April 12.—The first rays of royalist bitterness that followed the news of the death of the former German empress, appeared to have subsided today. The most aggressive adherents of the old imperial regime seemed to realize that it would be only bad taste but universally deemed throughout Germany the event were made the occasion for attempts at a reactionary propaganda.

The royal organ, Lokai Anzeiger, flatly announced that no monarchical demonstrations are to be held on Saturday when the empress is to be laid to her final rest in the mausoleum of her family at Potsdam.

Arrangements were begun today to transfer the body of Prince Joachim, who committed suicide last year to the Antiken-Tempel and place it beside that of his mother, a few days after her burial. This will be done in fulfillment of one of the late empress' dying wishes.

The various Hohenzollern princes decided at a conference held in Prince Eitel Friedrich's villa "Ingenheim" at Potsdam, to send Prince Oscar to Doorn to escort the empress' body to Potsdam. The other princes are to await their mother's body at Potsdam.

Court Pastor Von Dryen will conduct the solemn burial services in the Antiken-Tempel Saturday morning. This mausoleum, a structure of unique simplicity, is just off the historic Sans-Souci palace built by Frederick the Great.

Mourning services will take place tomorrow morning.

HARDING SCRAPS NATION LEAGUE IN HIS MESSAGE

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Amid all the impressive solemnity that marks a presidential appearance before a joint session of congress, President Harding came before the assembled house and senate this afternoon and gave the nation and the world the first authoritative outlines of the new administration's policy in foreign and domestic matters.

The foreign policy which the president outlined definitely and fully "scraps" the league of nations as it now exists, and declared that the United States can never become a member of it.

In order to get the nation back on a peace basis, the president declared he would approve a congressional resolution to this effect, providing that it contained no more than the simple declaration that the state of war which has existed between the United States and Germany for four years is at an end.

Satisfactory accomplished by such explicit reservations and modifications as will secure our absolute freedom from inadvisable commitments and safeguard our essential interests.

President Harding revoled, in states specifically, that the United States cannot hold itself aloof from old world matters, as to what will be the course of procedure after the peace resolution once more puts America in a state of technical peace, the president said:

"With the super-governing league definitely rejected and with the status of peace proclaimed at home, we must now negotiate the covenanted relationships so essential to the recognition of all the rights everywhere of our own nation and play our full part in joining the people of the world in the pursuit of peace and progress."

"To such accomplishment, to the complete reestablishment of peace and its contracted relationships, the realization of our aspirations for nations associated for world helpfulness without world government."

World government, for world stability on which humanity's hopes are founded we shall address ourselves, fully mindful of the high pressure, and the paramount duty of the United States in this critical period of the world."

While asserting his approval of the "peace by resolution" method, the president did not commit his administration to any definite time. He said that its passage must add no difficulty in effecting, "with just reparations, the restoration for which all Europe yearns and upon which the world's recovery must be founded."

The great bulk of the president's communication was devoted to domestic affairs—to the "national problems far too long neglected." That he said of the outset was the purpose for which he had called this extraordinary session of the 67th congress.

Three Robbers Were Captured While 5 Escaped

SHELBY, O., April 12.—Three robbers were captured and five escaped when a band of eight attempted to hold up an express car on a westbound Cleveland-Indianapolis train at New London last night. The captures were made by Detectives S. J. Waterman and Zack Hathaway, of Cincinnati, express detectives, who saw the eight men board a "blind baggage" in the Cleveland yards.

Suspecting a holdup the detectives trailed their quarry, watching the attempted robbery. When then suspects entered the express car with a command to the officers opened fire. The robbers fled, but three were captured. Efforts of a posse to arrest the remaining five have thus far proven fruitless.

PRESIDENT LABORED ALL NIGHT ON FIRST MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, April 12.—By laboring far into the night, President Harding finished this first message to congress in the early hours of this morning and the manuscript was dispatched immediately to the public printer to be set into type.

The president was at his desk until long after midnight, scratching out in longhand the communication which he will deliver personally to the assembled senate and house at 1 p. m. He wrote the entire message in pencil turning the written words over to his stenographer a few at a time.

It was indicated that the White House this morning that the message is considerably longer than usual with presidential messages and will be around 7500 words.

A communication of this length will require more than an hour to deliver.

GERMANS EXPECTED TO MAKE NEW PROPOSALS

PARIS, April 12.—Germany will be handed a bill totalling approximately 160,000,000 marks (normally $40,000,000,000) it was reliably reported as the reparations commission completed its hearings on the German arguments.

The total bill is expected to make such an impression on the Germans that they will make energetic efforts to present satisfactory new proposals before May 1, in order to avoid military and economic moves of coercion by the allies.

JUDGE HEARS REQUEST CASE BE DISMISSED

ELYRIA—The case of John Tulea against Louis Hody and John Fekos, florists of Lorain came up before Judge Redington this morning on a demurrer filed by the defendant who asked that the case be dismissed for the reason that the facts stated did not constitute a cause of action. At the same time the question of a receivership came up. The plaintiff claims that Hody has disappeared and that the sale of the business to Fekos was in the nature of a fraudulent transaction.

PARIS, April 12.—Nearly 50 per cent of the French youths called up for service in the class of 1921—that is those born in 1900—have been found to be medically unfit and have been rejected entirely or left over until next year. Since 1915 this proportion has been constant. No cause is officially assigned for this state of things, but it is pointed out that a large part of the present recruits are the sons of parents born immediately after the war of 1870-71.

WILMINGTON CROPS SUFFER SEVERELY

WILMINGTON, DEL., April 12.—The unexpected snow storm which has raged in this section has destroyed fruit crops and caused losses running into the millions of dollars. Five inches of snow has fallen and the mercury is registering 26 degrees.

Contractors and Union Men Hold Amicable Conference

Compromise Settlement Looms Large as Differences Are Smoothed Out—Both Sides Optimistic as to the Outcome and Eager to Get Busy and Settle Down to Working Basis

That the Elyria contractors are not opposed to the closed shop and have no intention of employing any but Union men; that the prospect for an adjustment of wages along amicable lines; and that the clouds which obscured the labor horizon in this city during the past few days, will soon be brushed aside by the concerted action of employer and employee were the bright particular high spots of the meeting which was held at the Chamber of Commerce, this forenoon, between the employers and the men representatives of the several unions.

Optimism of the finest character marked the conference and harmony prevailed to an extent which was most gratifying to all concerned.

At the session which was called at the Chamber of Commerce rooms, Mr. Emil Calman, General Manager of The Chronicle-Telegram, presided, in the role of mediator at the joint request of the contractors and the representatives of the unions.

Contractors Favor Union Shop

Several matters which were considered at the outset as the most serious bones of contention were smoothed out in the neatest, simplest manner and with a rapidity which suggested well for a clarification of all the questions at issue in the same amicable manner.

The adjustment of these matters was significant of the extent to which both parties seemed bent to reach a fair adjustment of differences.

Considerable business was dismissed by the emphatic declaration of the contractors that they had no desire to enter into a battle for the open shop that they desired and it was their intention to enter into an agreement with the unions to maintain the closed shop and that this was never so far as they were concerned a question at issue.

They do not want to do anything to crush or destroy the unions.

Eager to Get to Work

It was brought out that there were many business which were being held up because of the desire to adjust differences. Pending an agreement which all appeared eager to consummate nothing could be done with regard to figuring on this work which was in sight.

Several matters were discussed freely and openly and the same spirit of good feeling seemed to permeate in the bringing out of the various supposed differences and an eagerness to settle them without trouble.

It was further brought out that our building construction was lagging in Ohio than in any state of the union a condition which demanded unity and a common ground of action, so that all might benefit from the prosperity which would follow in the path of this great amount of work.

Another Conference Soon

While all the matters were not finally settled as the Chronicle-Telegram goes to press, they had progressed to such an extent that the decision was reached that the committee of the union would report to their respective organizations and the contractors committee would report to the parent body and after those several bodies had settled upon their plan of action the committee would again confer to arrange details and sign up a wage scale. Optimism was the prevalent atmosphere and there is strong leaning to the belief that each side will make concessions and that a compromise will be finally agreed upon which will be satisfactory to each side and conditions return to normal with a better feeling than ever before existed between the parties concerned.

CHRONICLE-TELEGRAM WILL SOON BE ISSUED FROM LORAIN OFFICE

Readers of the Chronicle-Telegram in Lorain will undoubtedly be pleased with the announcement that in a very short time the Lorain edition will be printed, published, and delivered from our own office at 7th near Broadway in the city of Lorain.

A contract was entered into some few weeks ago with Messrs. Morgan and Edick by which they were to erect a building 150 feet deep, with 3,000 feet of floor space, on Seventh Street, to be used for a newspaper plant. This building is now under roof, and promises to be finished on or about May 1st, and will be complete in every detail for the publishing of a first-class newspaper, and for the housing of a modern plant.

The new machinery, involving an expenditure of approximately $100,000, has been purchased and is modern in every respect. Four new intertype machines are now on the way and will comprise a battery of type-setting machines surpassed by none.

ALL UNION EQUIPMENT

A Walter Scott, 24-page Rotary Press (union made) will be installed, notwithstanding a statement made by a solicitor of the opposition that non-union equipment is being purchased for the Lorain plant.

The statement is such a gross misrepresentation of facts that it is hardly worth while to go into further details for the Scott Printing Press Co. is one of the oldest closed shop printing press manufacturers in the United States.

Our present editorial staff will be considerably augmented by capable, competent, and fair minded men, who will gather the news and present it to our readers from an unbiased standpoint. Full leased wire international news service will give full details of national and international events. The editorial policy of the paper will be conducted in the same spirit of fairness, always with the idea in mind of expounding the cause of righteousness, and justice, irrespective of any other factor.

None But Union Men on Job

The mechanical force comprise a foreman, who has already been employed, as well as a number of his assistants, will be composed of none but union men. The Chronicle-Telegram will therefore be conducted as a closed shop organization.

The healthy growth both from a circulation and advertising standpoint have been such as to warrant the publishers in giving to Lorain a separate medium from one published in Elyria with an entirely separate and distinct staff, including business manager, editor, etc., all of whom will make their homes, or are at present making their homes, in the city of Lorain.

The paramount effort of this medium will be to work in the interests of the city of Lorain and its citizens, and to provide a medium of which Lorain residents may be justly proud, and that will not reflect discredit upon the city as a whole.

WILCOX DECLARES TWO MEN INSANE

ELYRIA—Two men, one from Elyria and one from Lorain, were before Judge Wilcox on insanity warrants this morning. Collins Clark, of Elyria, has been acting strangely for some time. He was recently arrested charged with taking a dress from the Merthe Co. where he had been a porter for some time. He brooded over his trouble and the judge decided to send him to Massillon for treatment.

Steve Jacklich, of Lorain, thought his friends were trying to get his money away from him and his mind has become unbalanced. He has $200 in Liberty bonds and money in a South Lorain bank. The physicians called in the case declared him insane and he also was sent to Massillon.

OUTLOOK GOOD FOR PICKUP IN AUTO BUSINESS

ELYRIA—Officials of the Willys-Overland plant in this city, state that the prospects of additional activity are brighter at present than at any time since the general depression caused the plant to shut down last fall.

As was stated in the columns of the Chronicle-Telegram a few days ago, The Willys-Overland Co., of Toledo, placed several thousand men back at their former jobs, owing to increasing orders for their products and this condition is reflected in the local plant. Several departments which have been entirely closed down will begin operation within a few days, which will enable the company to put many of its old employees back to work.

It is expected that this condition will improve until the entire plant will be in operation. This will be welcome news not only to the employees but to merchants and citizens generally. With the revival of the automobile trade other plants in the city that depended on supply automobile trade other plants in the city that depended on supplying certain business to the automobile business will undoubtedly also be able to start up.

PEOPLE RUSH TO PROFIT BY DOLLAR SALES

ELYRIA—Elyria merchants received a prompt response to their advertising campaign in the Chronicle-Telegram for Dollar Day which started bright and early this morning.

According to the merchants it has been the most successful sale they have yet had. Hundreds of ladies were out with their shopping bags looking for the many bargains offered. At the Merthe store, The Elyria Dry Goods Co., the Lewis Mercantile Co., and John Lersch & Co., there was a heavy rush—the stores being crowded.

Harry H. Smith & Co., had a hard time waiting on customers, and The Wilkins-Hurst Co., Glade Theaters and Allen & Brown worked like beavers in caring for their trade. Robinson & Hancock had such a rush that they sent to their Lorain store for additional clerks, and Altman & Ackerman, The Foster-Fitch Co., The Outlet Clothing Co., and Dachtler & Dachtler disposed of many bargains. The shoe stores also profited. Philpott had a good day. So did the Leader Shoe Co., and Vestal. The hardware stores got in the game and every one of them had an excellent run of trade.

The rush continued throughout the day, and before the doors are closed for the night many thousands of dollars worth of seasonable goods will be disposed of.

HARRIS NOTHING BUT FAKIR SAYS WHITMAN

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 12.—Charles S. Whitman, special assistant district attorney of New York, kept Roy Harris out of bed a good part of Sunday night for the purpose of either breaking down or building up Harris' story that he and a man named Duncan had been hired to kill Joseph B. Elwell, New York sportsman.

When Whitman finished with Harris he was convinced that the man was a fakir. Harris, in fact, admitted it to Whitman and related that his story, after all, was a pure fabrication.

Final Strike Decision Again Thrown Upon Miners Shoulders

BY EARLE C. REEVES
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

LONDON, April 12.—The final decision of peace or war was again thrown upon the shoulders of the miners by Premier Lloyd George this afternoon.

After separate conferences with the miners and mine owners, the premier submitted to the miners federation a proposed basis of settlement. Upon its acceptance or refusal depends the question whether the triple alliance will call its threatened strike at midnight. Since the premier's proposition is at wide variance with the miners demands its refusal is looked for.

The government and the mine owners flatly reject the miners most insistent condition, that of pooling the mine owners war profits.

SAYS HUSBAND AND COIN HAVE DISAPPEARED

Mother and Three Children Reaches Elyria Before Missing Hubby and $1,600

ELYRIA—Elyria police interviewed Mrs. Michael Shanks and three children at the New York Central depot here after the quartet got off a west bound train when they learned that the husband and father had suddenly disappeared from the train on which they were traveling from Pittsburgh to Toledo.

The missing husband and father had $1,600 in his possession.

"We had sold our rooming house at Cleveland and had been to Pittsburgh with the intention of buying some kind of business," said Mrs. Shanks to Elyria police. "Not finding what we wanted in Pittsburgh, we started for Toledo."

"My husband was riding in the smoker," continued Mrs. Shanks. "He has $1,600 in his pockets, all that we had saved. I did not miss him until the train neared Elyria."

Station employees at Cleveland remembered a man who looked like Shanks get off the train at Cleveland with a shorter, heavier man. Shanks had been talking with such a man on the way from Pittsburgh to Cleveland.

Mrs. Shanks believed that her husband may have been lured from the train on which they were traveling, and robbed, perhaps murdered.

SMOKED WAITING TO HAVE LEGS RELEASED

CANTON, April 12.—Calmly smoking cigarette after cigarette for nearly an hour, with his legs pinioned under the crushed steel of a big Street Electric deliveryman car, Wilbur Hoopes waited patiently until an acetylene torch could be brought to the scene of a wreck and applied in cutting away the sides of the car so he could be extricated. Hoopes, and three other men were seriously injured early last evening when the big interurban car crashed into a line car making repairs near Louisville.

Hoopes' legs are crushed to that an amputation may be necessary.

BARBERTON BANK IS ROBBED OF $2000

BARBERTON—April 12.—At 10:15 this forenoon four bandits entered the Great Northern Building and Loan Bank here and commanded the two men and three girls to throw up their hands.

"We don't want to shoot," said one of the bandits, "so behave."

The door was swung to and the bank force was marched to the state and told to get in. Bandits began ransacking the cash drawer where they found $2,000. The bandits then made a dash for the rear door, where an automobile was waiting, leaped into the machine and disappeared.

ENTRUSTS BANKS FOR ACTION IN ACCEPTING MONEY OF MRS. DAVIS

DAVIS—In declining to grant an offer for Walter Davis, on Monday Judge Wood, of Mt. Pleasant, took occasion to pass some comments on the trial of the case in which he said:

"I watched this case very closely as it was tried, and it was peculiar in many respects, but I felt that the defendant had a fair trial. So I am not at all concerned. I am at least to give the State and the defendant a fair trial."

One of the unfortunate things of this day and age is speculation, and there is no doubt that many a man stands as Mr. Davis stands before God; that while they have been convicted, yet they are guilty of the same crime, probably, as the jury found him guilty of appropriating the funds of a bank to his own use. Many a man has done that, no doubt, and instead of the market going down it went up, and he was regarded as a great financier. It is one of the unfortunate things in this day and age of war pressure that in the desire to obtain money so many people overstep the bounds, and it is unfortunate for Mr. Davis that he is one that the market went back on and he was caught in the net.

There is one feature in this case that I do not like, and that is the fact that these bank officials took Mrs. Davis money, and I feel that that was a great wrong to her, and if I had the power I would certainly order the money returned to her, as I understand she did turn something over by the testimony in this case. No doubt she felt she was doing that in order to right a wrong, but instead of relieving her husband the bank officials virtually have taken the money she turned over to prosecute her husband. I feel that is a wrong, and should not have been done. While this court has no power to require that money be returned to her, yet before God, and before justice it should have been done. I feel that was a great wrong the bank officials did to Mrs. Davis in taking her money."

These rallies will be presided over by the respective district presidents, and will afford the district organizations an opportunity to promote their interests and welfare. The division conference will be presided over by specialists who will present programs of intense interest and value. Every officer and teacher will have an opportunity to get the real help that they need.

BOY REMBEZLER GIVEN ONE YEAR IN REFORMATORY

CHICAGO, April 12—Francis J. Carey, 19-year-old bank clerk who confessed embezzlement of $36,000 from the National City Bank of Ottawa, Ill., was sentenced to a year's imprisonment in the government home for incorrigible boys by Federal Judge Landis.

PARTIAL PLANS COMPLETED FOR COMMENCEMENT

OBERLIN, April 12.—Commencement exercises for 1921 will be held from Friday, June 17 until Wednesday, June 22.

A change in the appointment of senior chapel from that of former years, has been made. Heretofore the exercises have been held on the Thursday preceding commencement, but this has not proved to be an altogether satisfactory arrangement, as at that time many of the students have gone home, while very few of the commencement week guests have arrived. The faculty, believing that the final chapel service connects more closely with the year's work of the student body than the special exercises of commencement week, has advanced the appointment to come on the last day of college work preceding the beginning of the final examination on June 8.

The Conservatory commencement will be conducted in two parts this year instead of three, as in several previous years. The exercises are to take place on Friday, June 17, in Warner hall, and Monday, June 20, in the chapel.

The athletic management has scheduled a baseball game with a team representing Waseda university of Japan, to be played on Saturday June 19. In past years two games have been played with this school. Oberlin and Waseda each having won one game.

LORAIN POLICEMAN IS CALLED A "HOODFICKER"

LORAIN—Know Joe "Hoodflicker" Miller, the loop copper? "Hoodflicker" is the new cognomen Patrolman Joe Miller, who is most generally stationed at the "loop" is toting around these days.

Yesterday F. A. Drifke, who passes out the bread and water to prisoners in the lockup, got into an argument with Miller in front of the station house. Joe threatened to wallop Drifke with his police club.

"Go on you big Hoodflicker," yelled Drifke.

By the time Joe had looked for the word in the dictionary to learn whether Drifke was calling him a fool name, the dispenser of bread and water made an exit in the direction of Broadway.

COMPULSORY VACCINATION IS ADVOCATED

LORAIN—City health board last night passed a resolution recommending that the Lorain board of education require compulsory vaccination of all children entering the public schools.

Action taken by the board came after Dr. Valod Adair, city health commissioner, reported that only 65 per cent of the school children of the city today are vaccinated, against 90 per cent in Cleveland.

In recommending compulsory vaccination of all school children, Dr. Adair explained the system now existing in the Cleveland schools. He said that many school children during the last year lost valuable time because they were not vaccinated and were forced to be absent from their classes during the period of the smallpox epidemic.

During the recent smallpox and diphtheria epidemic, according to Dr. Adair, the health department spread propaganda broadcast, in an effort to impress parents of school children of the necessity of vaccination. After all efforts on part of the health board employees, but 65 per cent of the children were vaccinated, which meant that the remaining 35 per cent were forced to stay away from school during the epidemic.

Health board member John Piskur was the only one last night opposed to compulsory vaccination. He cited the case of a South Lorain boy who was vaccinated and his arm became infected and he is still under the care of a physician.

In urging health board members last night to recommend compulsory vaccination, Dr. Adair said in part:

"I think it is the duty of health board to recommend to the board of education the compulsory vaccination of school children both for smallpox and diphtheria."

"When a school child is not vaccinated and an epidemic of either disease swoops down upon the city, that child has to be taken out of school and remain away from his studies until the epidemic subsides. This is a bad condition."

"In Cleveland 95 per cent of the children are vaccinated. That means considerable when the education of the child is considered."

"In Lorain even after the exhaustive work the health department put forth in endeavoring to have school children vaccinated, only 65 per cent heeded our requests. If compulsory vaccination was made a law by the school board, this condition could not exist. Therefore, I urge that you men recommend it to the school board."

TAX REVISION, TARIFF, FACES LOWER HOUSE

WASHINGTON, April 12.—A legislative program so huge that it was stunning to the leaders confronted the house, of representatives Monday.

Beside the tax and tariff revision, in themselves tedious and difficult tasks, there were unfinished appropriation bills to be passed, a mass of reconstruction legislation under consideration, and a thousand or more matters of odds and ends waiting to be taken up.

House Overwhelmingly Republican Standing ready to tackle this great undertaking was a house overwhelmingly republican, but with one-fifth of its membership new to the legislative grind which a necessary to accomplishment. The old republican leaders were on hand to steer the course for their followers, and President Harding, the party leader, was in the saddle to insist on teamwork.

Few changes were permitted in the house organization. Speaker Frederick H. Gillett of Massachusetts began his second term as the presiding officer. Representative Frank W. Mondell of Wyoming took his place on the floor as Republican leader, and Representative James R. Mann of Illinois, veteran Republican leader and parliamentarian, stood at his back as prompter. They had the assistance of many of the old committee chairmen.

Death and sickness and defeat have stripped the Democratic side of the house of many of its most experienced and valuable members, and rendered more difficult its sole of criticizing and combatting the majority.

Former Speaker Champ Clark of Missouri, sagacious, benevolent guide who had led his party to victories in past years, was missing in his Missouri grave. Representative Claude Kitchen of North Carolina, weakened by long illness, as barred from his former joyous course in rough and tumble debate, though he was present to counsel and guide. The mantle of actual Democratic leadership has fallen on the shoulders of a new group of men, prominent among them Representative Finis J. Garrett of Tennessee; James F. Byrnes of South Carolina, and Edward W. Pou, of North Carolina. History will show how well they acquit themselves.

One Vacancy Still Exists The new house is made of 301 republicans, 132 Democrats, 1 Socialist. There is one vacancy, that of a representative-at-large from Pennsylvania, caused by the death of M. H. Garland. With the filling of the vacancy the house will consist of 302 Republicans. There have been filed about a dozen contests for the seats of sitting members, mostly Democrats, and this irregular division of the house may be changed somewhat during the coming session.

Not since the elections of 1912 did the voters of the country make such sweeping changes in the political complexion of the house as made by the elections of last November. In 1912 the voters returned to the house 290 Democrats, 124 Republicans, 15 Progressives, 5 Progressive Republicans, and 1 Independent.

In the present house there is one Socialist, Meyer London, of New York, an experienced legislator who has seen previous service in the house. There is one woman, Rebecca Robertson of Oklahoma, a Republican, the first woman congresswoman since Jeannette Rankin of Montana, who was defeated for reelection in 1918. There are about 100 members of the house who come without any previous experience in congress, and these with over 100 others make up the total of 301 members who have seen two wars and less of service.

Democrats Experienced Most of the Democratic members are experienced. They are from the south, just about a half a dozen from the north, and the rest from the north. But even in the south the Democratic ranks were thinned at the last elections, the republicans having made gain of members from Alabama, Texas and Missouri.

The opening session of the house was scheduled to be routine and perfunctory. After the swearing in of the speaker, the clerk of the house, sergeant at arms, doorkeepers, and other officials, the members of the house were called and sworn in by states, the speaker administering the oath of office. There followed then the naming of the committee members by the republican floor leader and the democratic leader. By unanimous action of the democrats Claude Kitchen was named leader and given the democratic complimentary vote for speaker of the house.

Committees Rearranged. The committee membership was rearranged by the republican majority of the house, based on the relative numerical representation of the two parties and to give a greater number of committee assignments to the republican members. The Ways and Means committee will consist of 17 republicans and eight democrats; the large standing committees of 21 members will consist of 16 republicans and 5 democrats. The Appropriations committee of 35, and the Rules committee of 9 members have not been appointed.

With this organization work completed the house planned to adjourn for the day. During the short session there was dropped into the house a flood of bills many of them being measures that failed of passage in the last congress. New members dragged from their pockets special legislation in which they were interested and which played a more or less conspicuous part in their local campaigns.

The set legislative programme for the house passage of the anti-dumping of American valuation legislation, the emergency farmers tariff bill, the army and navy appropriations bills that failed at the last congress, a general tariff revision, revision of the tax laws, special legislation desired by President Harding to give him greater latitude in consolidating and reorganizing the various departments and agencies of the government.

Session May Run 'Till August. With the legislation out of the way or on its course the legislators will take up budget legislation, packer legislation, reappropriation of the house budget, the new exchanges, cold storage, control of production, modification of the Clayton Anti-trust law as affecting railroads, coal control, soldier bonus, immigration restriction, infancy and maternity aid, patent office reorganization, and such other legislation as shall from time to time thrust itself forward as immediately necessary.

Republican leaders admit that this is an ambitious programme and that they do not hope to get it through at the present session. With what must be done at once the most hopeful see the constant daily grind running far into August, while others speak despondently of an adjournment in November. There is talk already of a recess during the dog days of July and August, but the leaders say there must be no shirking and no abandonment of the work until the legislation needed by the country shall have been enacted.

J. H. Leonard appeared before the city council and urged that a park board be appointed to look after the city parks. He claimed that vandals were robbing the parks of trees, flowers and dirt, and that their beauty was being detracted from by the practice.

For many years while I was perfecting my formula I studied and investigated the laxatives and cathartics on the market and became convinced that their main fault was not that they did not act on the bowels, but that their action was too violent and drastic and upset the system of the user, which was due to the fact that they were not thorough enough in their action, some simply acting on the upper or small intestines, while others would act only on the lower or large intestines, and that they almost invariably produced a habit requiring augmented doses.

I believed that a preparation to produce the best effect must first tone the liver, then act on the stomach and entire alimentary system. If this was accomplished, the medicine would produce a mild, but thorough elimination of the waste without the usual sickening sensations, and make the user feel better at once.

After experimenting with hundreds of different compounds, I at last perfected the formula that is now known as Dr. Lewis' Medicine, which I truly believe goes further than any other medicine.

AGRICULTURISTS OF NATION MEET AT WASHINGTON

(By International News Service.)
WASHINGTON, April 12.—Representatives of the farmers' organizations from all parts of the United States, at the call of national associations with headquarters in this city, Monday opened a series of conferences here for the purpose of drafting legislative proposals and recommendations as part of their plan for national agricultural development "to bring production and distribution back to normal."

Calls for these national conferences came from the headquarters of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Farmers' Union, the National Grange, and the National Farmers' Union—three of the largest farmers' organizations in the country. The Farm Bureau Federation, which boasts of the largest individual membership, began its session this morning with members of its executive committee in conference with delegates from nearly every State in the Union.

Inter-Organization Sought. The meeting of representatives of the National Farmers' Union is called for next week—April 19—but on Thursday, April 14, the National Grange has requested the call of the national agricultural societies to send a delegation to a combined conference during which it is expected that the desires and recommendations of all parts of the country will receive earnest consideration. In this inter-organization conference it is also planned to dovetail many of the proposals of the individual associations with a view to drafting a tentative legislative programme behind which all of the societies represented can place the full force of their combined membership.

Need Market for Surplus. The fundamental problem which confronts farmers of the United States at this time, according to conference delegates who are here to engage in the national agricultural forum, is a method of securing an adequate market for the surplus products which are piling up in American warehouses. In this connection it is cited the Southern cotton yield, it being estimated that 14,000,000 bales of this product are now resting in this country because middle Europe has no money with which to purchase it.

The conference expect to evolve some kind of a plan which may be submitted to Congress along with proposals from their sources for the foreign marketing of domestic products.

Members of Congress and of the Cabinet have been kept in close touch with the problem of the farmers, and leaders of the national agricultural organization hope that out of the recent get-together session will come something tangible that will aid in moving out of the United States its great surplus products of the soil.

Tariff Problem Favored. Revision of the tariff is receiving consideration at the hands of the farm bureau representatives; their principal contention being that "the farmer cannot afford to buy on a high protected market and sell in competition with the world."

It is definitely understood that the agricultural association, during the current conference, will again urge the passage by Congress of an act similar to the Capper-Volstead bill, which failed in conference during the past season. This bill proposes to legalize co-operative marketing efforts on the part of farmers, giving to the co-operatives rights on a par with those granted corporations. Several attempts have been made to secure the dissolution of co-operative agencies on the ground that they were being operated in violation of the anti-trust laws, and although none of these efforts has succeeded, the farmers feel that definite and final action on the part of Congress would give added moral support to these distribution organizations.

To Urge Muscle Shoals Work. The farmers will also prepare to urge upon Congress the appropriation of additional funds for the completion of the dam across the Tennessee River at Muscle Shoals, Ala., as a step in the proposed production of nitrogen in the government plant there. Thirty millions of dollars are needed for this work it is estimated, and officers of the American Farm Bureau Federation declare that this is one of the most important of their immediate designs in the way of agricultural development. This conclusion is drawn by the fact, they point out, that crop yields must be increased to feed the increased population of the country, and that this can be done only by the use of fertilizer such as can be manufactured by Muscle Shoals. Approximately $100,000,000 has already been invested in the plant at Muscle Shoals, but its operation with the steam power available is held to be too expensive.

In addition to these major recommendations the farm bureau representatives are discussing packer control legislation, immigration, highway construction and development and many other subjects of vital interest, not only to themselves, but to the entire country.

"SAFETY FIRST"

(By International News Service)
MARTINS FERRY, Ohio, April 12.—A local resident had several cases of bonded whiskey in his home. When he learned the police were searching for booze in neighboring houses, he moved his cases into an alley beside his residence.

After the police had searched his premises, finding nothing, he started for the alley, intent upon restoring the cases to their places in his cellar.

But the booze was gone. Several persons had noted his actions and removed the cases while owner and police were in the house.

PROPOSED POSTAL CHANGES
WASHINGTON, April 12.—Consolidation of third and fourth class matter is provided in a bill introduced in the house by Chairman Steenerson of the house postoffice committee.

Both classes of mail are to be known as parcels post and carry parcels post rates. Existing rates on books, seeds, bulbs, cuttings, roots, scions and plants weighing 8 ounces or less would be continued at 1 cent for each two ounces.

Inexpensive Gas-Saving Devices

The efforts of Federal, State and Economic authority and those of gas producing, transporting and distributing companies to conserve the supply of natural gas and prolong its use have brought manufacturers into the field with many new gas-saving appliances.

Range makers are designing their appliances to burn gas economically and increase efficiency and auxiliary apparatus for use when it is not necessary or desirable to employ a large range or cook stove in the preparation of one or two items of a modest meal.

New and improved designs of heaters are on the market and others are in process of production and will soon be available for purchase.

The thrifty householder will investigate the merits of improved and approved gas-burning appliances between this time and next winter season for the two-fold purpose of saving in the expense for gas and improving service by the most efficient possible use of it.

Good Night Stories

By Blanch Silver

Illustrated by Nera Harrison
DAVID DISCOVERS A NEW FRIEND.

DAVID stood still for a second as a queer drumming noise sounded from some bushes at the side of the road.

"Now, what in the world made that funny noise," he mused, pushing aside the bushes.

Out popped a little bird, who flew across the grasses, uttering a high-pitched noise.

"Well, I'd say it was a turkey if I didn't know better," laughed David. "Wonder what it is! Wish—" but at that moment the very object of his wish hopped from the bushes beside him.

"See! I didn't wait for you to finish," laughed Squeedee, the elfin from Joyland, shaking David's hand. "And how are you today?"

"Very well," replied David. "But I want to know what kind of a bird of chicken that is over there, and what makes him act so funny. He looks as if he had struck him and named him. What is he, Squeedee, anyway?"

Squeedee looked in the direction David pointed and saw a medium-sized, grayish-brown bird hopping in the grasses.

Then he laughed merrily and blew on the magic whistle which hung at his side.

The little bird stopped his hopping and looked around. When he spotted Squeedee he flew back and settled himself beside the elfin.

"Well, well, Daddy Grouse!" laughed the elfin. "Meet my little friend, David. He thought he had named you in some way, didn't he?"

"Oh, I knew I hadn't," laughed David. "But I thought maybe some one else had."

"Not me," laughed Daddy Grouse, shaking the soft tuft of feathers on his head. "I never get near enough any more for that."

"Meet My Little Friend, David."

one for that. And he spread out his broad, fan-like tail with an air of pride.

"That's one thing that will never happen to me," he laughed.

By beating his wings down upon the log on which he had settled, he made the queer noise that had first attracted David's attention.

"No, indeed!" he said. "Too much depends on my keeping trim. Mama Grouse is sitting on her eggs just inside that clump of bushes, and when we heard you coming we thought, of course, you were an enemy."

"But why didn't you stay and protect her?" asked David. "I hadn't even seen your nest."

"I didn't want to wait until you found it," laughed Daddy Grouse.

"My main object was to attract your attention, wasn't it?" he asked.

"That's a funny habit we grouse have. We fly away from our nest or our young, whichever we may be protecting, in the opposite direction, and most often our enemies follow us. In that way we can save the hiding place or the little birds."

"But say, now that I've found you are a friend, come and meet my wife," he said, and Squeedee and David went to a little nest made of grass nestled among the bushes.

Here Mama Grouse was patiently sitting on fifteen snowy-white eggs. They were all about one-fourth the size of hen's eggs.

She was glad to see the little elfin and David, and made them welcome.

David was sorry when the school bell rang, but promising to return when the little ones were hatched, he bade his new friends good-by and hurried away to school.

HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble
WEDNESDAY, APRIL 13.

This is not expected to be a very fortunate day, according to the reading of the horary figure. While it will be auspicious enough for those in employment, since the luminaries are in happy juxtaposition, yet, in general, business is not well fortified, and all new enterprises are discouraged. There is little promise for mercantile or professional success, and warnings of every class are unfavorably expected. Certain planetary figures point to disaster through impetuous and unguarded actions, which may lead to adverse legal judgments, if such redress be resorted to. The domestic situation is not favorably expected. Those whose birthday it is have not the forecast of a particularly happy or prosperous year, although those holding substantial positions are better favored. A child born on this day is born under a star which will bring success.

The Fears and Doubts Grace Draper Caused Marge.

AT my suggestion that we sit down in order to talk more comfortably, Grace Draper threw open a door behind her into a bedroom prettily furnished with china draperies and upholsteries.

"Will you walk into my parlor?" she said with a hint of mockery.

I finished her old line mentally with a little shudder.

"Thank you, it looks very attractive," I countered. "But as I must go down and look at my car I think I probably would be more convenient to sit downstairs or on the veranda—it is really a shame to stay indoors on such a day."

She hesitated a moment, then gave a little Gallic shrug of her shoulders.

"Oh, of course, if you're nervous—about your car. The last words were probably dragged in, and the subject was again perceptible. It was exactly as if two women were struggling within her, one wishing to conciliate me, the other desirous of nothing so much as the opportunity to tear me into pieces.

I knew that her keen mentality had fathomed the shyness of my excuse concerning the car, and that she knew I wished to continue my conversation with her in the open air instead of behind closed doors of being locked. My pride hesitated at the thought of her being able to answer at my fear of her, but my common sense, my knowledge of her capabilities, and my desire to be content with presenting an unbroken front to her and signaling me imperatively to neglect no detail in my dealing with her.

I followed her down the stairs, through the spacious living room, out to the veranda. Once there I spoke lightly, casually.

"If I will remain here just a minute I'll look at the car. I'll be right back."

A Sneering Tribute.

Without giving her a chance to reply or to go with me I hurried down the steps and across the lawn to the car. I made a pretense of looking at the wheelbarrow, but I was really looking at her. I am sure no superior temptation will ever come to me that I will not bade me turn my back on her. I saw her eyes, and I saw her face, and I saw her hands, and I saw her feet, and I saw her whole self, and I saw her whole world.

"You are plucker than I thought," she said meaningfully, then her face and manner changed suddenly, and with a swift movement she clung herself to my arm, her hands, looking up at me imploringly, her face convulsed.

"Oh, Marge, I don't mean all that," she said. "It's only because I have suffered so and am so miserable that these little things escape me sometimes. I know you have every right to shrink from me. I wronged you terribly. In the past, but oh, truly I am penitent. Don't you think I have suffered enough? I don't want to be a prisoner. Can't you forgive me? I feel as though I never can and peace unless you do."

During a scene as I do, my first thought was of the girl kneeling before me, and of my possible spectators to her theatrical action. I glanced toward the road, and saw that the veranda was crowded with a few of the floor, effectively screened her from the gaze of any passers-by. Then I said meaningfully, then her face and manner changed suddenly, and with a swift movement she clung herself to my arm, her hands, looking up at me imploringly, her face convulsed.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl 17 years old. Every body seems to love me, but I don't know how to love any of my boy friends. I love all my girl friends and older people. But I don't know what love is when it applies to a boy. I have had two or three boys propose to me, but I told them all "No." I don't want to be an old maid. I would be glad of your advice how to love some one well enough to marry. BLUE BIRD.

BLUE BIRD: Don't worry your head, my dear, about not being loved. Love the boys, for as sure as you are blue you will love very dearly.

She Chats About a Detachable Collar and Cuff Set.

YESTERDAY I met my friend Mary. She has just opened a small shop for the sale of dainty neckwear and other feminine trinkets. She was hurrying to her store, so she asked me to accompany her. As I knew I'd see something interesting I accepted her invitation.

"What lovely things you have here!" I exclaimed, as I approached one of the tables in her tiny shop.

"I'm glad you think so, for we do try to have exclusive novelties with a will appeal to women of good taste," was her reply, as she arranged a glowing "two collar."

"I remember if you'd let me make a sketch of some of these things. I'm sure they'd be appreciated by lots of women who read my diary," I said.

"Certainly. You may choose just what you like. Suppose I show you some of my most interesting sets—at least, as far as particularly appeal to me," was her answer.

"That will be lovely," I replied, for I knew how unerring Mary's taste is.

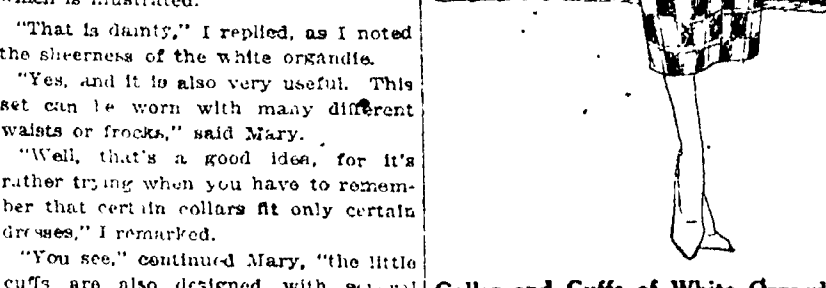

"I think you'll like this set," she remarked, as she picked up the collar which is illustrated.

"That is dandy," I replied, as I noted the shyness of the white organdie.

"Yes, and it is also very useful. This set can be worn with many different waists or frocks," said Mary.

"Well, that's a good idea, for it's rather trying when you have to remember that certain collars fit only certain dresses," I remarked.

"You see," continued Mary, "the little cuffs are also designed with several tricks which give a little more body to the collar and cuffs of white organdie, Work with Tan Shirt and Plaid Skirt."

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES For Better or Worse

Copyright, 1921, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

HOW sweet she was when he married her—do you remember?

The wedding party was gay with apple blossoms. The bride and groom were married under an old apple tree in the orchard. And the bride wore a simple frock of white muslin and carried a great bouquet of pink and white apple blossoms, and her wedding veil was pinned on with some of them. And she looked like a great, big, pink and white apple blossom herself, with her brown hair tinged with gold and her blue eyes like violets. And, oh, the look of happiness and hope upon her face!

The man was older, but he was happy, too, and very proud.

Her Whole World

"For better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness and in health." We all cried a little when the old minister spoke the ancient words of troth. It's silly to cry at weddings, I suppose, and yet there's something very pathetic about so much hope, isn't there?

And they were going to the city to live. Yes, they had a nice little apartment all furnished and ready. And the bride had a whole trunkful of dishes and pretty linen.

Of course, she expected to be homesick for the country and for the orchard and for the bluebirds mating in the spring—she knew she would miss her little brothers and sisters, and she couldn't bear to think how her mother would miss her. But, then, she had him—and who could ever be anything but ecstatically happy with such a divine being for a husband?

Yesterday I saw her, and I didn't know her.

She has been married ten years and she had come home to visit. She brought with her three beautiful, joyous children. But she herself was no longer joyous or beautiful. She was very smart and well groomed, she had her hair dressed in the latest fashion, her hands were beautifully manicured and everything about her spoke of luxury and of great attention to appearances.

But she has hardened and coarsened, somehow. Even her voice is different, and her laughter is not a pleasant thing to hear.

I couldn't understand until—I met her husband. Coarse, hard, cold-eyed, loose-lipped—what had the years done to him?

Nothing, except to accentuate what had already been in his face on the day he married.

And Apple Blossom, as I have always called her since her wedding day, has become hardened and coarsened, too.

They say she had a hard time the first three years.

He was an irresponsible creature, always going somewhere with some one and leaving his little wife at home, hurt and dazed and bewildered.

Does She Remember?

No, he wasn't a drunkard or a gambler. He was just a coarse, thick-skinned, low-minded man.

Day by day and hour by hour, he poisoned her innocence and dragged down every beautiful instinct in her nature, until now, Apple Blossom is a hard, cold-hearted, coarse-minded woman, who tells vulgar stories and laughs at vulgar songs.

Why did he marry her—this man of such a different mold?

He admired her for her innocence and gentle trust—and yet the first thing he did was to destroy both of these things.

Last night I saw her sitting under the apple tree with the new moon rising over her shoulder, and she was very silent and there were tears in her eyes.

I wonder if she was remembering herself as she used to be, and feeling sorry.

WHO would have believed it possible that centerpieces of china birds would supersede those of silver and glass?

Yet such is the case. The green parrot, owl and cockatoo are given the place of honor and have become very popular. The birds are life size and are reproduced in all their brilliant coloring.

The parrots are perched on a branch of a natural-looking china tree. Some look straight ahead, while others glance over their shoulders.

Some of the smaller birds are playing see-saw with a vase to balance the china board in the center. Others decorate a rail fence, or barred gate, with a flower vase at either end.

The glossy gray owl sits on a brown stump and looks as if he were puzzling his wise, old head over the question of how he happened to get into such an exciting place. While the cockatoo, standing on a branch, twists his head inquisitively as if looking for more of his kind.

Perhaps the most beautiful example of all is a wonderfully-colored blue parrot with a bright yellow throat. It is done in lustre-ware, and the coloring and the modelling are exquisite.

For a breakfast or luncheon centerpiece there is a happy group consisting of Mrs. Duck and her family. They are at the edge of a china pond, and it is evident there is about to be a swimming lesson.

The more freakish pieces include a brilliant, tropical bird poised on a gray rock with nothing but a peacock with its tail outspread, standing among the ferns, and various groups of snow-birds in life sizes.

Enamel bowls of lustre-ware with four candlesticks to match are also very much in vogue for centerpieces.

The lustre-ware bowls are generally filled with imitation fruits or flowers of glass, china, lead, fish scale or wax.

Another odd fancy for a table decoration consists of glass resembling a pile

YOUR HEALTH

How "Dry Catarrh" Comes and Just What to Do About It

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
Commissioner of Health, New York City

THERE are almost as many kinds of catarrh as there are victims. Each individual has his particular variety.

In general, the disease is divided into "moist catarrh" and "dry catarrh."

Moist catarrh is the form in which there is an increased secretion of mucus which drops into the throat, and requires frequent clearing of the nose and throat.

"Dry catarrh" is, of course, a misnomer. The word catarrh indicates a flow in this case of mucus. In dry catarrh there is no flow at all. Indeed, this is the difficulty—there is a drying up of the secretions. The nostrils are filled with crusts and scabs, hard and offensive when removed.

If the history of such a case is taken, it will, almost invariably, be found that originally the patient had a moist catarrh. In the beginning there was thickening of the mucous membrane lining of the nose, more or less obstruction from the swollen tissue and a profuse discharge of mucus.

What Happens.

Now we see what happened. The thickening of the mucous membrane continued until the little blood-vessels were squeezed by the new tissue. More and more the circulation was interfered with until, finally, the blood-vessels were incapable of supplying sufficient blood to nourish the lining of the nose.

In the mucous membrane are two kinds of glands. The mucous glands, secreting thick, tenacious mucus, and serous glands, secreting a fluid like water.

In dry catarrh the serous glands seem to die when the mucous membrane gets very thin. Without their diluting and dissolving secretion to carry away the crusts, the serous glands, therefore, accumulate a slowly growing mass. This hardens on the surface, conforms to and clings to the underlying tissues, and gradually forms a great crust. When this is expelled, it shows a perfect cast of the inner contour of the nose.

When it comes away the delicate membrane may be torn, causing bleeding and subsequent ulceration. To this corruption are added the discharge of the nasal sinuses, which are usually involved.

All in all, the disease is disgusting alike to the patient and his associates.

Simple Aids.

To relieve the disease, the first thing to do is to dissolve or remove the crusts. This may be done by gently swabbing the inside of the nose with an alkaline solution.

Then some stimulating application may be introduced into the nostril. For

Answers to Health Questions

J. J. K. Q—I have been troubled with my tonsils and they are swollen. I have been to the doctor a few times and am using a gargle, but they still remain swollen. I am 25 years of age. Am I too old to have my tonsils removed?

A—No, you aren't too old to have your tonsils removed.

V. Y. Q—I am a man 57 years old and always drink in moderation. Since I cannot obtain liquor, I have grown thinner, and have a weak feeling all the time in my legs, which I believe is due to the absence of a daily stimulant. Can you suggest some tonic to overcome this weakness?

A—Build up your general condition. Eat nourishing food and drink plenty of milk. Regular outdoor exercise and a course of sleep should result in improvement soon.

FAMOUS "WITS" OF HISTORY

Little Stories of Men and Women Whose Sayings Are Still Remembered

By MARK STUYVESANT

The Way Charles Haddon Spurgeon Corrected Himself.

THAT an appreciation of witty sayings and the ability to retort in kind was not the least of Charles Haddon Spurgeon's equipment as a great English preacher is evidenced by many amusing incidents. We may well believe that some measure of his ability as a wit and also as a preacher was inherited from his grandfather, as the following demonstrates:

It is said that one day the old gentleman, who was much loved by his flock, was preaching in the great church of St. Martin's, London.

"Well," he replied, "that all depends on how you take me. If weighed in the balance I am afraid I should be found wanting, but in the pulpit they tell me I am heavy enough."

When Charles Haddon Spurgeon was a young preacher at Cambridge, the day of his first sermon took him completely by surprise. He was so nervous that he had to have said that if a thief went to heaven without a change of nature he would go around picking the pockets of the angels. The matter declared that the angels have no pockets.

The next Sunday, Spurgeon declared from the pulpit that he was delighted to be set right by one who really knew, and then he said:

"So I would say that if a thief got among the angels without having his nature changed he would try to steal the feathers out of their wings."

One day when Spurgeon came late to a church meeting a pompous deacon thought it proper to rebuke him by telling him with his watch held out as Spurgeon hurried into the meeting.

"So I would say—"

men began to put a finger in each ear. What would Spurgeon do in a case like that?

"Why," Spurgeon said, without hesitation, "I would pray that a fly might alight on his nose."

One of the gifts Spurgeon possessed in high degree was a memory for faces. But names sometimes escaped him. One day a man came into the vestry to shake hands with the great preacher.

"How are you, Mr. Farrington?" Spurgeon asked.

"I am well, sir," the man replied, "but my name is Farridge, not Farrington."

"Of course," Spurgeon replied instantly. "I promise you I will make game of you no more."

The Rev. Mr. Fullerton declares that the top shelves of the bookcases in Spurgeon's library contained some "dummy" volumes. One can well imagine the astonishment of an inquisitive searcher who climbed to examine the books on the top shelves and was confronted by such titles as "The Signs and Aches of Faith," "Tyndeman on Cleanliness," "John Bull on Braggance," "The Composition of Milk by A. Dealer," "Jonah on Exaggeration," "Goblin on Raving Horses," or others equally absurd.

Showing at The Strand Theater

STRONGHEART OPENS TONIGHT

The opening performance of "Strongheart," which the local Y. M. C. A. is putting on, will be given at the Strand Theater tonight. It will be the opening of the third engagement of this play in Elyria during the last ten years, but will be presented tonight by an entirely different cast, a cast of young matamores of the city, most of whom have had experience along this line in high school class plays. Dress rehearsal last night showed that the company has the play perfectly in hand and that everyone who sees this production of "Strongheart" will witness something unusually well done by home talent.

The cast which is presenting the play is made up as far as possible of members of the young men's division of the Y. M. C. A. There are three female parts in "Strongheart" which are very ably taken by some of the Elyria girls who have shown their talent in former plays. Four of the male parts are taken by young high school graduates who have carried leads in recent high school productions. The other men in the play are upper class men in the high school now. The characters of the play are cast as follows:

Phineas Guthrie, a sophomore
Dwight Koppes, a senior
LeRoy Reisinger, a senior
Verne Braddon, a senior
Albert Champney, a senior
John Smith, a junior
Hubert Struthers, a senior
Reginald Deirre, a senior
Ongataha, known as "Strongheart," a "P. C."
Wayne Koppes, a senior
Mrs. Nelson, Frank's mother
Ruth Aussiker, a senior
Gene Gessner, a senior
Cecily Nelson, Frank's sister
Lucy Forbes, a senior
Ash, a back
Reed, a trainer
Malcolm Forbes, a rubber
Don Halpin, a rubber
Arthur Horan, manager of the visiting team
Worth Favour, a member of the team
Charles Davis, Phillip Houseman, Henry Tulk, Wendell Williams, Carl Heinzerling, Walter Scott, Harry Smith, Howard Vanatta

There are still some good seats.

"BEATS FIVE DOCTORS"
WRITES J. L. MORGAN
ELMORE, OHIO

April 29, 1918, I was taken very ill. Had four doctors at different times. They didn't know what ailed me. Finally I went to a Kidney Specialist. He examined me and pronounced it a bad case of "Bright's Disease of the Kidneys," as my urine was half albumen. I asked him if he could cure me. He said, "No man could cure me." I gave me some medicine, but the doctor did me no good. From that time on I got worse. Then I saw a testimonial in the Toledo Blade, where San Yak had cured Bright's disease. Then I bought two bottles of San Yak, took the medicine as directed. Before I had taken the second bottle, I saw an improvement. I bought a dozen bottles. I saw the medicine was just what I wanted. I took one dozen bottles all; and today I am a well man. To my urine, it is perfect. I don't think there is a better medicine in the world today than San Yak and I am welcome to the use of this medicine. Sold at J. A. Ebert's, Elyria, Ohio.

ORIGINAL APE AFFORDS AMUSEMENT ON STREETS

ELYRIA—Just think! The original Oco, the ape that plays in the production of "The Son of Tarzan," which is being shown at the Strand Theatre this week, is running around town, loose. But don't be afraid. He is absolutely harmless. He is as full of tricks as he can stick and will be on the street, riding his little bicycle during the showing of the picture. He caused a regular riot in Toledo, by pulling off the trolley line on the car and holding up all the traffic, and he had some time in Sandusky, from where he hails from now. So, come on out, you kids! And mother and dad, too, and have some fun with Oco! He is always willing to play.

AMERICAN

"Outside the Law"

ELYRIA—The crook dramas of recent years that are really great may be counted upon the fingers of one hand or named in one breath. But a place among them is earned by the newest story of the underworld. It is "Outside the Law," a film feature written and produced by Tod Browning, in which Priscilla Dean is starring on the screen of the American Theater.

The struggle of crooks to go straight is an old theme—but the struggle of Silky Moll and Dapper Bill Ballard to live their own lives is a part, but not the theme, of Tod Browning's picture. It is merely the dramatic skeleton that sustains the comely flesh of human heart drama in which Miss Dean, Lon Chaney and Wheeler Oakman are the principals.

The real theme runs through the story like the undercurrent of a mysterious river. It is the passion of an old Chinese philosopher for an ideal—principles of right and wrong, that are fundamental and not sections and paragraphs from his quibbling statute books. In his oriental devotion to what is right, E. A. Warren shows the Chinese dealing a justice "outside the law."

DREAMLAND

"Tiger's Cub"

William Fox production starring Pearl White, at the Dreamland Theater and a large audience at the opening gave a demonstration evidence of its great satisfaction.

Pearl White is seen in the title role, and portrays most delightfully the character of a young girl born and reared amid the snow wastes of Alaska, and who never has known the companionship other than the rough types who inhabit these regions.

When David Summers, a young easterner, arrives in Alaska in search of his father, the Cub quickly recognizes the kind of man she has intuitively felt existed somewhere, and friendship quickly ripens into love which is forced to fight its way at every step against gross brutality and worse.

STRAND

"The Sport of Kings"

A photographic sensation in which the motion picture camera caught and registered with amazing detail, the death of a jockey when his horse suddenly fouls and crashes through a fence in the third quarter of a race, is one of the extraordinary episodes of action which local "movie" fans will see on the screen at the Strand Theatre, when the Buffalo Motion Picture Company's version of "The Sport of Kings" by Arthur Somers Roche, begins its engagement there today.

The accident that resulted in the jockey's death occurred at a far southern track, during a race especially organized for the Buffalo Motion Picture Company producing staff. A prize race horse, purchased by the company to take the part of the spirited, vicious tempered Vivandiere, equine heroine of Mr. Roche's famous story, was being ridden to victory. The jockey's instructions, prior to the race, were to carry out the action of the story itself, wherein the horse is whipped heavily at the third quarter causing it to foul and be disqualified, thereby bringing heavy profits to the men who had planned the criminal act.

The jockey obeyed, with the result that the fast running horse swerved sharply to the left, bolted and crashed through a board fence before the jockey could bring its head to the right. The rider was thrown, and the horse stumbled, in crashing through the fence, falling heavily on the prostrate form of the jockey. He died ten minutes later.

A crowd of several thousand spectators, invited to the track by the Buffalo Motion Picture Co., especially to see how motion pictures of a real horse race are made, witnessed the tragedy, while two cameras set to catch the action of the jockey whipping the horse, in reality photographed a sudden accident that brought fatality to the rider.

By a strange turn of fate the horse escaped injury, and suffered only a few slight scratches from the splintered boards of the fence.

"The Nut"

ELYRIA—"Douglas Fairbanks' new picture "The Nut" at the Colonial Theatre has all the elements that go to make up a successful photoplay. In all probability this offering will prove to be one of the star's most popular vehicles.

Possessing the usual spontaneity and swiftness of action that characterize all Fairbanks' celluloid creations, it is further distinguished by some of the most unique novelty features ever utilized in the making of a photoplay.

Like other Fairbanks' plays, this film is conspicuous for its clean entertainment. As is very appropriately set forth in the opening sub-title, "there are no murders in the first act, no ruined homes in the second, and no regenerated hero anywhere in the picture."

The theme of the story is love—the unquestionable love of a man for a maid. And the romance that runs through these five reels of exuberant, wholesome fun forms the foundation for a very clever and intriguing plot. The whole story happens in Greenwich Village, famous Bohemian quarter of New York City. The play derives its name from the fact that "Doug" as Charlie Jackson, the eccentric hero, earns the nickname of "The Nut" because he is an inventor and on account of the devices he resorts to in his efforts to win the heart of a fair lady.

La Motte, who registered such a distinct triumph with the agile "Doug" in "The Mark of Zorro." The villain in the piece is William Lowery who has been hissed to success as "heavy" in several Fairbanks' productions. Barbara La Marr, in addition to furnishing a very pleasing amount of pulchritude, gives a splendid characterization as consort to the villain.

HOME DESTROYED

Fire destroyed the home of Albert Joseph, Mill avenue, early yesterday morning. Flames were discovered at about 4 o'clock by neighbors.

The fire seems to have started somewhere in the center of the building, and although the firemen got the blaze under control in a very short time the house was so badly damaged as to be almost a total loss.

The cause of the fire seems a mystery as this is the same house that caught fire a few days ago, but the fire was extinguished before much damage was done.

LORAIN HIGH TRACK MEN HAVE SOME BIG RECORDS OF YEARS AGO TO BEAT THIS WEEK

LORAIN, APRIL 12.—Lorain High School track aspirants will have to burn the cinder paths this week if they hope to break records that have been established by speeders in the years gone by. Some of these records have been standing for 12 years and it looks as if they will continue for some time.

Among the old timers who have records to their credit that have not been beaten is Edward Garner, who completed the 100 yard dash in 10.02 seconds. This record has remained unchanged since 1909.

Another veteran who has a record that still stands unbroken by any athlete in the local high school is Calvin Corbitt, who heaved the 12 pound shot 41 feet and 3 inches. This mark was made in 1909.

The other veterans who have records unchanged are Milton Friedman and "Tony" Lucas. Friedman established a mark of 56 seconds in the 440 yard dash and Lucas completed the mile in 4 minutes and 56.35 seconds. Both of these records were made in 1911 and are still standing.

Following are the outdoor records in track events held by members of the Lorain High School:

Bronson had hoped to obtain Johnny Newton of Toledo and Mansfield, as an opponent for Mullen, who has disposed of a number of promising middleweights before Sandusky audiences, but was unable to come to financial terms.

Cleveland, Elyria, Toledo and Port Clinton boxers will stage the preliminaries.

New York, April 12.—Where will the big league pennants fly in October? Uncertain is the task of "picking 'em" has always been, it was never more difficult than now.

Competition promises to be keen between two American and three National league teams that a pennant selection in either league is a toss up.

One thing seems certain—New York will fly one of the gonfalon "Gotham" may even succeed in cornering the world's series for the first time in history.

Be that as it may, here is our guess for 1921:

National League American League

New York Cleveland

Brooklyn New York

Pittsburgh St. Louis

Cincinnati Washington

Chicago Detroit

Boston Philadelphia

Philadelphia Boston

The Giants look more like pennant winners today than at any time during the last four years.

Graw has rebuilt his wobbly infield and put young blood into the lineup that has succeeded in plugging up the holes through which the Giants lost the 1920 pennant.

With Kelly Frisch, Bancroft and Rapp on the infield and Burns, Young, Walker and Brown to take care of the outfield posts the Giants now have balance and defensive strength.

McGraw has a strong staff of seasoned pitchers in Nehf, Barnes, Toney, Denton, Douglas, Sallee and several youngsters. His catching staff is second to none in the National league.

The Brooklyn Dodgers aside from the addition of Dutch Reuther and the loss of Marquard are the same team that won the flag last season.

The same team—yes—but lacking the fine physical condition that gave them an early jump on the field last spring, Brooklyn is well-balanced too, and has the strongest pitching staff in the league. But the Dodgers haven't got the punch that the reconstructed Giants possess.

Nevertheless, they figure to save New York all the competition McGraw's boys will care about, and should finish no worse than second unless they go to pieces.

Last season the Pittsburgh Pirates finished fourth. This year, with Rabbit Maranville to make their infield and a finely balanced team with good pitching and lots of speed, they should give the Giants and Dodgers a hot argument. They may beat Brooklyn out at that.

Dissatisfaction in the ranks of the reds has done Pat Moran's team a lot of harm. And even with Roush, Groh and Kopf back in the lineup before so very long. Moran has his work cut out to finish in the first division this year. The St. Louis Cardinals, as they stand today, look ready to guarantee to be no worse than fourth with Cincinnati and Chicago fighting it out for fifth place.

Fred Mitchell should and no doubt will show a great improvement in the Boston Braves. Bill Donovan has a pan's sized task on his hands at Philadelphia. These two teams seem destined to fight it out for seventh place.

The National league team that appears to have the best chance of upsetting calculations as Chicago. There is no telling what Johnny Evers may get out of the Cubs. He may work wonders with them.

It seems a certainty that New York and Cleveland are destined to fight it out to a latter finish for the American league flag this year.

Miller Huggins has the strongest array of playing talent ever gotten together by a New York American league team. He has such terrific sluggers as Ruth, Pipp, Roth, Schanz, Peck, Bodie Ward and perhaps Baker to manufacture runs. He has a powerful array of pitchers in Mays, Shawkey, Collins, Harper, Quinn and others and a bang-up catcher in Schang. In fact, the Yankees have everything but speed.

Arranged against the Powerful Yankees are the Speaker's flashy Cleveland word champions. They will have the race with the spirit of victory and the confidence that comes with victory. They will have Speaker, one of the greatest of players out there on the field fighting and playing with them. Speaker's ability to handle men and his brilliant pitching—these are the things that to the balance slightly in favor of the Indians this year as the other goes it.

The St. Louis Browns will be touch comers. They have a real pure but they haven't the pitching to combat successfully with Cleveland and New York. The Fohlmen should finish a strong third, however.

Washington and Detroit seem destined to fight it out for the other first division berth unless Kid Gleason can prove himself a miracle man with the White Sox.

Connie Mack has been working slowly but surely in rebuilding the Athletics. He now has a young combination with a lot of natural ability and without a doubt his team will make a hard fight to get out of the rack.

With Huggins Duffy and Jimmy Burke running the Red Sox, Boston will be no set opponent for Philadelphia to out run. This pair, however, probably will fight it out for seventh place.

AUTO ACTS ENTIRELY DIFFERENT THAN CAR
FOR THIS CONDUCTOR

ELYRIA.—Employees of the street line Tuesday were having a round robin laugh at the expense of conductor Harry Thompson.

Employees of the company declared that a few days ago Thompson purchased a Buick auto and also rented a garage on Seventh street. The men aver that when Thompson went to take out the car for an airing he started the car backing and then lost control of the machine.

As the car backed onto the alley Thompson unconsciously yelled to Pete Wagner, his motorman and when the car, still without control struck the green line tracks. Thompson reached for the bell cord but found the rope absent in passing through the air. Thompson's efforts to halt the car frantically ended when the car ran over a lot of spikes and stuck in the ditch as Thompson was sweeping the car back to the garage.

Railway employees declare that an accommodating lady came to Thompson's rescue and drove the car back to the garage.

ANOTHER BARREL OF PORK?

The demand for an investigation of what has become of the money the government has contributed to good roads is taking shape. Senator Townsend gave the movement a start when he took the lead in opposing the good roads appropriation in the last session of congress, and Senator King recently said that he intends to offer a resolution calling for a complete investigation of the subject as soon as congress convenes.

In approving this attitude it is not necessary to oppose government aid for good roads. The duty of the general government to encourage improvements in transportation facilities is admitted upon every hand. Even the most enthusiastic enemy of river and harbor pork favored the improvements of rivers and harbors. The opposition was to the method which resulted in parceling out money for the ostensible purpose of improving waterways when the real purpose was political. In Senator King's opinion the government threw away about $500,000,000 in that sort of "river and harbor improvement," and the objection now is against placing good roads funds in a new pork barrel.

The law requires that roads built with government aid shall be good roads to begin with, and that there shall be proper provision for keeping them good. It is charged that in many states the roads built with government aid are not good and that such roads as are built are being neglected, so that the investment is literally disappearing in the mud.

Under such practices the whole cause of good roads will be discredited and congress ought not to appropriate a nickel to road building except with the assurance that the money will be spent in strict conformance to the law.

A RAILROAD CONFERENCE

The proposal coming from the organized railroad workers that President Harding call a conference to be held between themselves and the railroad executives exhibits a wish for a peaceful settlement of pending railway labor questions.

The railroads are not making money and they cannot increase rates further without making the industrial condition worse. It follows that operating costs must come down. If labor is to contribute to the reduction labor must be consulted, and must be convinced that the demands made upon it are fair. What better way is there to approach that subject than through a national conference of railway presidents and the labor leaders among railway workers?

Some railroad presidents have argued at great length that the relation of the roads to the workers is one that can be determined only by separate action, each road and its employees settling their own affairs according to conditions prevailing on the road, but even if this position is granted the existing transportation problem constitutes a national problem. If the proposed national conference cannot decide for each road what is to be done about railway wages it can at least try to agree upon general principles and modes of procedure.

Moreover, the moral effect of such a conference ought to be good. A refusal would make the men feel that the roads are looking for a fight and would tend to bring about that deplorable result with consequent loss to the country and ruin to some of the roads.

JAPAN DIGGING IN.

Japan's long communique on Yap may be summed up to this: The Japanese have received the mandate for the island, they are digging themselves in, they mean to stay, they would like to see the color of the eyes of the fellow who would put them out. Japanese diplomacy is a windy institution. It traverses the whole Pacific ocean the long way around in preference to charting a straight course. But always it is for Japan, yielding nothing, admitting nothing, demanding that everything in the nature of a concession shall be conceded by the opponent. This, perhaps, is why Japan gets along so far and so fast in the world. She takes the fullest advantage of nations that will go a great distance in defense of their rights and still stop short of a fight. It is the Prussian idea transplanted in Asia. Some day it may pass through the same experience as the policy so zealously aped.

Armenians have at last fulfilled the tradition of the worm that turned.

Soon our country will be at peace with everybody except the pacifists.

An Editorial
On Advertising

Advertising is the consumers' protection against fraud

It is also one of his greatest aids in reducing the cost of life's necessities, because it is the seed of competition

Before the advent of advertising each manufacturer catered to a certain clientele and had practically a monopoly on that trade. A consumer who was dissatisfied with a product or a service had to go out in search of another and better commodity. This was both costly and inconvenient.

This condition also led to the existence of many small manufacturers who sold their products locally. Their cost of production was enormously high because their output was so small. Not only was the cost of production high, but the quality of the product was not uniform. Small manufacturers could not afford expensive equipment and satisfactory conditions such as were really necessary. And of course, the consumer paid the bill.

Then came advertising. The qualities of various products were announced nationally. Demand was created for products of a certain brand, and thousands of miles from the source of their manufacture, sales increased. Production increased. Larger production made possible the use of better machinery and greater efficiency. Prices came down. Still the demand increased and various time-saving devices not in existence were invented. And prices lowered steadily.

In the case of automobiles, advertising through its creative power made possible the low priced cars, which never could have been made in quantities without the original stimulus of national publicity. In clothing it made possible the production of ready-made clothes nationally advertised, of guaranteed quality. Advertising a lowering in price of some commodity quickly causes competitors to lower their price. This is a frequent occurrence in normal times.

If the grocer on the corner advertises a sale on sugar at three cents a pound less than his competitors, you could doubtless, soon see a general reduction in the price of sugar throughout the neighborhood. And if the original grocer persisted, the cut in prices would become fixed and would spread throughout the city. Without advertising such price reduction could not become sufficiently well known to cause its general adoption.

Advertising also enables the purchaser to obtain practically all the information needed before making a purchase. It permits a careful comparison of competitive brands and a selection of the most desirable without leaving it to the discretion of perhaps an uninformed clerk.

Bringing a new product to the market through advertising stimulates competitive manufacturers to improve their product or lower their price. Advertising encourages healthy competition, and competition makes possible better products for less money. She will not ask for a box of raisins, a can of corn and a pound of butter," but will call for these articles by their trade mark or advertised brand, because when she does so she will receive greater value for her money, thanks to advertising.

SENATE'S MIND TURNS TOWARD
FOREIGN POLICY

By J. Hart Campbell

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The senate reconvened Monday with a tangle of foreign and domestic problems to be unravelled by it during the long, eventful weeks ahead.

As the gavel of Vice-President Coolidge, presiding officer of the upper chamber fell upon the hands of the ornate clocks of the senate chamber pointed to noon, an increased Republican majority and a decreased Democratic minority prepared for a stream of presidential appointments aside from the consideration and confirmation of appointments and the speech-making characteristic of senatorial procedure, the senate is expected to wait so far as most domestic matters are concerned upon the house to exercise its prerogative of originating tariff, tax and other important legislation.

While the house is wrestling with domestic questions, however, it is regarded as highly probable that the senate will find plenty in the foreign situation to keep it well occupied in the immediate future.

Borah May Sift Colombia Fight. It is anticipated that the fight over the ratification of the disputed Colombia Treaty will be renewed shortly. Its ratification, favored by President Harding, is opposed even by some of its Republican opponents, but there are indications that Senator Borah, of Idaho and other Republican senators lined up against it will force another heated debate, this time probably in open executive session, such as prevented its ratification at the special session last month.

Another tempest impending is one over the nomination of former Representative John J. Esch of Wisconsin, as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Opposition to Esch's confirmation is being led by Senator La Follette, Republican of Wisconsin. Esch's political toe was blocked when it was first sent to the senate by President Harding during last month's special session.

No Move For Peace Likely. Unless the President decrees otherwise there will be no move by the Republican leaders to try to get about the repassage of the Knox peace resolution at this time, or until such time as the German reparations dispute is settled. Several potential Republican members of the senate foreign relations committee agree with the President that to put the resolution, which was passed by the last congress and vetoed by former President Wilson, now would be "inopportune."

The formulation and announcement of a definite and final foreign policy by the President and his advisors is being awaited by Republican and Democratic senators alike with undisguised interest and on the part of some of them with manifest concern. The latter is especially true of those Republican and Democratic senators "irreconcilably" opposed to the Versailles Treaty and the League of Nations covenant "inextricably interwoven" with it, in any form, or with any modifications or reservations.

May Open League Fight. Republican Senators who were classed as "mild reservationists" in the fight over the treaty in the last Senate are, they say, not inclined to share the belief in "irreconcilables" profess to entertain that the league issue will not be opened up again, and that the treaty having been "scrapped," is as "good as dead." One argument advanced by the "irreconcilables" to justify this belief is that the President would not care to incur the risk of splitting his party wide open by suggesting that the Senate accept a "re-written" Versailles and League pact.

One of the first moves by the Senate proposed by Senator Dillingham, Republican, of Vermont is the repassage of the immigration restriction bill former President Wilson vetoed at the close of the last congress. It is understood President Harding favors the enactment of the measure in law, and that Representative Johnson, of Washington, chairman of the house immigration and naturalization committee, is willing to sponsor the senate measure, so it may be re-passed quickly by the house.

Seek Tax Revision. Several important senate standing committees are to remain engaged with hearings on proposed domestic remedial legislation, Senator Boies Penrose, Republican, of Pennsylvania, expects to have the senate finance committee, of which he is chairman, continue to conduct hearings on suggested tax revision while the house and the house ways and means committee are wrestling with the tariff. By taking the burden of the taxation situation off the shoulders of Representative Fordney, Republican, of Michigan, chairman of the house ways and means committee, and his Republican colleagues of the house, Senator Penrose believes both permanent tariff and tax bills can be disposed of by August.

Propose R. R. Remedial Laws. Senator Cummins, Republican, of Iowa, chairman of the senate interstate commerce committee, proposes to have the senate authorize his committee to begin a far-reaching investigation of the country's railroad conditions with the idea of providing remedial legislation, including probable amendments to the Esch-Cummins railroad act.

"Utilities Merit a Square Deal,"

Says President Harding

Every community in Ohio enjoys the invaluable benefits and comforts of some one or all of the public utility services—light, heat, power, communication and transportation.

Every community has its utility problem to solve at one time or another—higher rates are necessary, extensions or improvements must be made, or new capital is required to supply the demand of the public for good service.

Hence, it is of significant interest at this time to know that the attitude of the nation's chief executive, President Warren G. Harding, is toward the public utility industry. Here are some excerpts from a public address the new President delivered in Cleveland just before his nomination.

"In effecting the restoration we must wipe out the contributing causes, and make sure from this time on that honest investment in honest public service shall receive an honest return for that public service. The capital which seeks to render a necessary public service merits a square deal and it must have it."

"Deserted credit must be restored and flexible scales of charges must be provided, so that a public may pay justly for that which it demands. The exploitation of ten or twenty years ago justified no failure in good faith today. The public which is served has an obligation no less than that of those who serve it."

"Old-time values are out of harmony in a new era of money's changed measurements. Stable financing, righteous earnings, and just returns must be based on a proper charge for a service rendered."

Anything unreasonable about that? Isn't that a matter of fact, good business—the kind everybody wants to see more of.
